

For those who don't know me, my cattery name is Wyldthingz. Its a crazy thought to me that I have been breeding for almost 20 years. It has not an easy thing as the enthusiasm of breeding often becomes very real, challenging, expensive, and at times heartbreaking.

I was blessed to have had some solid early mentors who I met at my first cat shows. Being an artist, I was able to use the "artist's eye" to pick cats who went on to excel in both the show venue and breeding. I got to experience the development of the Savannah along with TICA first hand in the preliminary and advanced new breed rings in which we discussed the breed traits and goals at length. I later produced the first female Savannah to Supreme and the first silver savannahs to supreme in the early days of championship and I continue to produce show Savannah today.

Wyldthingz cats are in almost every Savannah pedigree today and have contributed to Savannah breeding programs around the world.

I hope some of my experience can translate over as I would like the chance to give back to the Savannah community being part of breed committee.
